INDIAN RESIDENTIAL SCHOOL HISTORY AND DIALOGUE CENTRE

As it neared the completion of its mandate, the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada established the National Centre for Truth and Reconciliation at the University of Manitoba to be a repository for its records.

When the TRC conducted its final west coast National Event in September 2013, UBC suspended classes for a day so that students and faculty could attend that historic event. At the end of the day, UBC President Stephen Toope announced the university's intention to establish a west coast affiliate of the NCTR at UBC.

In its June 2016 meeting the UBC Board of Governors approved the Indian Residential School History and Dialogue Centre (IRSC) for construction. Construction is now underway, with a projected completion in the 2017-2018 academic year.

The Centre is being built with several purposes in mind. One is to provide a more accessible place on the west coast for former students and survivors, their families and communities to access their records and other historical material that the TRC and others have gathered, and to have a place to discuss their experiences, the history, its effects and implications.

Another is to provide public information for students and the public. Most people have had very little access to information about Indigenous people or the history of the interactions that have shaped Canada, and even introductory information can make a difference. With more complete knowledge of history, more adequate address of contemporary challenges and opportunities is possible. The Centre will be one very positive way to address this situation.

The IRSC will also be a Dialogue centre. Much work is currently underway with different units on campus and Indigenous communities and organizations to address important issues—issues of Indigenous health, community resiliency, economic development, governance, and many other concerns, and the Centre will be a place in which that work can move forward.

The work of the Centre will be more extensive and progress more rapidly with your support. If you are interested in learning more about the Centre, please see aboriginal.ubc.ca, and if you would like to contribute to the Centre's work, please see support.ubc.ca/projects/the-indian-residential-school-history-and-dialogue-centre/

If you are among the majority of Canadians who do not know what the Indian residential schools were and why understanding them is so important, visit indigenousfoundations.arts.ubc.ca for further information.
