MUSQUEAM INDIAN BAND 2016 ELECTION INFORMATION

Musqueam Indian Band is Changing its Election System
What Voters Need to Know.

Please read ALL the attached information carefully.

The election of the Chief and Councillors of the Musqueam Indian Band used to be held under the Indian Act election system. But the next election will be held under the First Nations Elections Act.

What is the First Nations Elections Act?

The First Nations Elections Act is a law that offers new and improved rules for elections. It was developed in consultation with First Nations organizations in different parts of Canada. The law is optional. Musqueam Indian Band Chief and Council see many benefits to elections being held under this new system and have made a choice to move to it.

Highlights - Key Changes for the next Election

- ✓ The term of office for Chief and Councillors elected at this election will be 4 years.
- ✓ All persons wishing to be a candidate for chief must pay a $100 fee, and all persons wishing to be a candidate for councillor must pay a fee of $100.
- ✓ To become a candidate, all persons who have been nominated must sign a candidate acceptance form and pay the appropriate fee. If the Electoral Officer does not have the signed form and the fee by 6 p.m. on the third day following the nomination meeting, the nominee is not a candidate and will not appear on the ballot.
- ✓ Mail-in ballots will no longer be automatically sent out to all off-reserve electors. Anyone who wants a mail-in ballot will have to fill in a form asking for one and send it to the Electoral Officer, who must receive it no later than the 6th day before the election. The form must be accompanied by one piece of identification that proves who the person is (like a status card, a driver's licence or a health card).

For more information:

If you would like to read more about the First Nations Elections Act, INAC's website has information at www.aandc.gc.ca/elections

SAFE DRINKING WATER MONITOR PROGRAM

Drinking Water Frequently Asked Questions

The drinking water that is supplied to our homes comes from either surface water or ground water. Surface water collects in streams, rivers, lakes, and reservoirs. Ground water is water located below the ground where it collects in pores and spaces within rocks and in underground aquifers. We obtain ground water by drilling wells and pumping it to the surface.

Public water systems provide water from surface and ground water for public use. Water treatment systems are either government or privately-held facilities. Surface water systems withdraw water from the source, treat it, and deliver it to our homes. Ground water systems also withdraw and deliver water, but they do not always treat it. For more information on public water systems, visit

CDC's Public Water Systems page. For more information on how public water systems treat water, visit CDC's Water Treatment page.

Public Water Systems

What type of health issues can be related to water quality?

The presence of certain contaminants in our water can lead to health issues, including gastrointestinal illness, reproductive problems, and neurological disorders. Infants, young children, pregnant women, the elderly, and immunocompromised persons may be especially at risk for becoming ill after drinking contaminated water. For example, elevated levels of lead can cause serious health problems, especially for pregnant women and young children. Federal law requires that systems reduce certain contaminants to set levels, in order to protect human health.
